

The last two weeks have seen several major storms move through the Central Gulf of Alaska. As a result Halibut fishing has slowed to a crawl and production has been limited pushing up prices. There appears to be a window of good weather for the fishermen early this week that could result in decent Halibut landings by weeks end . . . stay tuned!